Population, Education, and Health Seminar Series

Stephanie Bohon
Department of Sociology
University of Tennessee

Everything New is Old Again: Color-Blind Racism and Bad Math in Smith v. Georgia

Dr. Bohon will examine the Georgia Supreme Court ruling in the capital murder case of Brandon Smith to illustrate how existing "fair cross section" practices in Georgia's legal system lent themselves to the creation of a 2002 case law that institutionalizes discrimination against Latino participation in the jury process.

September 19, 12:30-1:30 pm, 217 Mumford Hall

Co-sponsored by the Institute of Public Policy and the Truman School of Public Affairs. For more information about this biweekly seminar series, please contact Jake Cronin at croninj@missouri.edu